

JUSTICE DENIED

There are such things as real conspiracies. In the real ones, though, the motive, the means, and the perpetrators are usually discovered sooner or later.

One or two people might be able to keep a secret. The more who know, the more likely one of them will have a conscience, and believe the truth should be told.

Breonna Taylor case grand juror: We weren't given the option of indicting the two cops who shot her

"The Grand Jury is meant to be a secretive body. It's apparent that the public interest in this case isn't going to allow that to happen," a spokesperson for Cameron said in a statement. Despite the concerns over the release, the attorney general's office said it would comply with the order to release the recording on Wednesday in response to the juror's complaint.

An attorney for the juror told The New York Times that Cameron "misrepresented" the deliberations and "failed to offer the panel the option of indicting the two officers who fatally shot the young woman."

The attorney general's office said it is "confident" in the case they presented but acknowledged that jurors were not given the option of indicting Sgt. Jonathan Mattingly and Det. Myles Cosgrove in Taylor's shooting."

Now that the truth is known, we can hope that that those murdering cops will be indicted, tried, and convicted.
