

Planned Chaos

The Idiotic Invasion of Iraq

US-Sponsored Terrorism in Iraq and “Constructive Chaos” in the Middle East

"What is unfolding is a process of “constructive chaos”, engineered by the West. The destabilization of Iraq and its fragmentation has been planned long ago and is part of the ”Anglo-American-Israeli ‘military road map’ in the Middle East”

On the surface, it doesn't make sense. The US lies its way into a second unnecessary war against Iraq, removing a Sunni-led secular government, handing control to the Shiite majority at a cost of hundreds of thousands of Iraqi lives, nearly 5000 American lives, and trillions of dollars. Then we start a rebellion in Syria against a Shiite-led secular government, funding Sunni extremist rebels, who fail, but cross into Iraq and threaten the government we installed there.

We're supposed to think it's incompetence. They don't care whether we blame Bush or Obama, though it wasn't really planned by either of them.

1. And of course we're expected to think it is all the fault of the Muslims and their violent, extreme fundamentalists. They have reacted in ways that are easy to demonize. And there are plenty of people who are happy to portray Muslims as the ultimate evil threat. Many would rather not look to deeply into what "our" side is doing in the background.

Plans for Redrawing the Middle East: The Project for a “New Middle East”

"The term “New Middle East” was introduced to the world in June 2006 in Tel Aviv by U.S. Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice (who was credited by the Western media for coining the term) in replacement of the older and more imposing term, the “Greater Middle East.”

At the time, Israel was carrying out air force bombing attacks on Lebanon, with US approval. Rice called this part of the "birth pangs" of the New Middle East. It was also being called "creative destruction".

So, why hasn't the Obama administration put an end to this "project" initiated under Bush? In my estimation, it isn't really up to him. I think he might if he could. He has done what he could to modify it, to exert diplomacy to avoid military action, but I believe there are elements of the Pentagon and the CIA that act independently of the President.

Bush went along willingly, and Cheney enthusiastically. Obama wanted out of Afghanistan sooner, but he was not given that option.

Whatever the exact power relationship, it is clear that foreign policy is not controlled by the will of the people. It needs to be. We cannot do it by simply electing a President. We need to fully inform ourselves, get united, and elect a Congress with a high priority on stopping the mayhem. It won't be easy; maybe impossible, but we need to try.

The strategy of "creative" chaos and destruction is not only terribly wrong but could easily get out of control and backfire. We are creating entirely too many enemies, and unlike many Americans, they are fully aware what the US is up to.

As we are reminded by current events of the lasting destructive effects of the needless, unjust, and unwise invasion of Iraq, a nation that was not only NOT at war with us, but lacked the ability to threaten us in any way, it is worth remembering just why such a thing could happen.

It would be easy to vaguely associate it with the terrorist acts of 9/11/2001. Though that event was exploited by Bush and Cheney as an enabling excuse, it was not the reason.

"The roots of the Iraq war trace back to the founding in 1997 of a Washington DC think-tank called The Project for a New American Century (PNAC). The core mission of PNAC was to establish what they called "Pax Americana" across the globe. Essentially, their goal was to transform America, the sole remaining superpower, into a planetary empire by force of arms."

PNAC was not secret about this. They published their plans. Perhaps few noticed, or took them seriously at the time.

Of course it was not just about the lust for empire, for the glory of it all. As Smedley Butler pointed out many years ago, war is a racket. It is not about principle, it's about the money.

"the war in Iraq cost more than three trillion dollars ($3,000,000,000,000.00) to execute. Every bullet fired, every bomb dropped, every MRE eaten, every helicopter shot down, every missile fired, every truck destroyed by an IED, every oil well guarded, every uniform worn, and every body bag filled translated into a slice of that money going to a company connected to the PNAC members of the Bush administration, who lied us into that war..."

The author of the following article also believes the plotting politicians had help, from where we should least expect: the press.

Our public media is supposed to help guard against such things. Thomas Jefferson hoped and thought it would.

Just as happened during much of the Vietnam disaster, the press, both print and broadcast, were too late to investigate and criticize, just when they most needed to.

At least, we know now not to ever let that happen again, don't we?
